LA PETITE ÉCOLE

by Alice Voisin

A tough conversation should always start with curiosity. The filmmaker manages to capture the curiosity, creativity and eagerness of the children, while being their quiet friend assisting them patiently to tell their own stories. The film does not go for the big drama but focuses on the specific situation and makes it easy to relate to the protagonists while we are getting to know them and the school they go to. Always on the side of the children, always in the now, not afraid of emotions, “La petite école” makes space for the true nature of children on the move in a world of millions of refugees.
